DESCRIPTION: The tool is basically the same as the already approved Model 41, except that it uses an extra long breech plug into which the piston is guided. The use of the piston serves only to reduce the fastener velocity. Identical safety features are included in the new model. These include angle fire control, breech interlock, Visi-check firing pin indicator, a 3½" guard on the muzzle end, and the inability to operate if the guard is removed. The loading and driving operations are the same as those described in the original resolution.

INSPECTION AND TEST: The Model 122MP was tested and accepted for listing by the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., in File No. SA 3680, Assn. No. 65 K 38, issued from Chicago, Illinois, February 18, 1965.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends that the resolution adopted July 16, 1963, under Cal. No. 1738-61-SA, be reopened and amended to include the approval of Model 122MP for driving studs into structural steel and masonry for use in New York City under the provisions of C26-1265.0, C26-1340.0, C26-1360.0, C26-1367.0, C26-1383.0, and C10-38.0 of the Administrative Building Code.

Pow-R Set, Piston-Set and Shure-Set fasteners are to be used in conjunction with Model 122MP with allowable loads as shown in the Underwriters' Laboratories report SA 3680, dated February 18, 1965.

The tool must be kept under lock and key at all times when not in use. Only a qualified operator, who has completed a training course to the satisfaction of the manufacturer or his agent, may use the tool.

The operator must carry on his person, at all times, a qualified operator's identification card issued by the manufacturer or his agent. The operator shall always verify the thickness and type of material into which the stud is being driven. The tool shall only be used on those materials listed in the Underwriter's report, and all other conditions of the resolution adopted July 16, 1963, under Cal. No. 1738-61-SA, be complied with.

152-63-SA—Iron Fireman-Webster Inc., Cleveland, Ohio, filed for approval of the appliance known as Iron Fireman, Petro and Whirl Power CF-100 GO and CF 100 GO SM Gas-Oil Burner under the provisions of Article 12 Chapter 26 Administrative Building Code, and the Oil Burner Rules of the Board.

PROPOSED USE: Gas-Oil burner.

DESCRIPTION: The burner is a combination gas-oil burner and is so designed with interlocking controls to prevent more than one fuel from being supplied at any time. The range is from 1.5 to 9 GPH for oil and from 420,000 to 1,330,000 BTU/Hr. Gas.

In operation when oil is the fuel, the oil is pumped from a tank to the atomizing nozzle where it is sprayed into a stream of air and is electrically ignited by an arc produced by the ignition transformer. In the event of flame failure, the electronic control system shuts the burner down. When gas is the fuel, the gas from the supply main passes through the following controls, manual shut-off cock, pressure regulator, automatic shut-off valve and volume control valve. The gas is discharged through jets into the combustion head where it mixes with air from the fans. An integral air flow switch prevents the flow of gas except when the fan is delivering air. The gas is ignited by a pilot flame which in turn is electric spark ignited from its own transformer. Both the pilot flame and the main burner flame are supervised by electronic controls which will shut down the burner in the event of flame failure.

INSPECTION AND TEST: The appliances have been approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories under MP 810.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as Iron Fireman Gas-Oil Burner Models CF-100 GO and CF-100 GO SM, for use in New York City when installed in accordance with the requirements of Article 12 Chapter 26 Administrative Building Code, and the Oil Burner Rules of the 985-64-SA—Gaylord Industries, Portland, Oregon, filed for approval of the appliance known as Gaylord Ventilator System, Models A, AB, B and BD, under the provisions of C26-712.0 Administrative Building Code.

PROPOSED USE: Grease extractor and ventilator.

DESCRIPTION: The models are basically the same differing only as to mounting and arrangement of back, side skirts and overhang.

In operation, air, vapors and contaminants are drawn into a slot at high velocity (1000 fpm) impacting on a baffle and caused to change direction 180° in passing around the lower edge of a fire damper baffle. Beyond this point, other fixed baffles in the form of vanes and pipes contribute to further extraction as the result of impact or change in direction. This impacting and centrifugal effect acts as a separator or extractor of the contaminants. These contaminants are collected in a trough and are flushed or drained into the drain system.

A system of upper and lower cleaning pipes is located in the exhaust plenum above the grease trough. Orifices and spray nozzles in these pipes provide for washing and spraying internal surfaces of the plenum and the grease trough with either steam or hot water.

Admission of the steam or hot water is through a strainer and solenoid valve which is electrically controlled. A cleaning cycle occurs each time the exhaust blower is stopped.

An automatic fire control is obtained from a compensation type thermostat located at the exhaust outlet and adjusted to respond to gas temperature of 350°F and to respond in all cases of temperatures not in excess of 375°F at the outlet.

The thermostat, in addition to actuating the fire control switch to close a fire damper and interrupt the blower circuit also energizes the water or steam solenoid to provide water or steam in the plenum space.

INSPECTION AND TEST: The appliance has been approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories under R 4926.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as Gaylord Ventilator System, Models A, AB, B and BD, for use in New York City under the provisions of C26-712.0 Administrative Building Code. 1002-64-SM—Northern Virginia Steel Corp., Springfield, Virginia, filed for approval of the material known as Springfield Open Web Steel Joists "J" Series under the provisions of C26-519.0, Administrative Building Code.

PROPOSED USE: Steel joists used in all types of construction.

DESCRIPTION: The "J" Series joists are manufactured in depths ranging from 8" to 24" in depth. The top chord of the joists is made up of two angles ranging in size from 1" x 1" x 1/8" to 2" x 2" x 3/16". The bottom chord is made up of two angles ranging in size from 3/4" x 3/4" x 1/8" to 1 1/2" x 1 1/2" x 3/16". The web is a round member ranging in size from 7/16" to 13/16".

The dimensions are in accordance with Dwg. A1 of 1, which is on file with and is part of the record. The joists are designed in accordance with the Standard Specifications of Load Tables, Open Web Steel Joists 1963 Edition of Steel Joists Institute.

INSPECTION AND TEST: Tests were conducted on various sizes of steel joists by Froehling & Robertson, Inc., Richmond, Virginia. The tests were conducted to meet the requirements of C26-519.0.d.1, Administrative Building Code.

The load tables submitted by the applicant are all figured on total load (live and dead), and it was necessary to determine what percentage of the published load would cause a deflection of 1/360 of the span. Therefore, the test was conducted so as to determine what percentage of the load that would cause the deflection of 1/360 and allow that percentage of the total load to be assumed as the live load.

The complete report is on file with and is part of the record.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the material known as Springfield Open Web Steel Joists, Series "J", for use in New York City when installed in accordance with the requirements of C26-519.0 Administrative Building Code. The Committee further recommends approval of the load tables for the Series "J" joists as submitted in the catalogue described as the Standards Specifications and Load Tables Open Web Steel Joists 1964 Edition of the Steel Joist Institute, except that the loads shown in that catalogue being based on total load (live and dead) shall be figured on the basis of 70% of that total load as the maximum live load, and 30% of that total load as the minimum dead load. It is further recommended that all plans submitted to the Department of Buildings showing the proposed use of this construction shall be labeled: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. 1247-64-SA—Adamation Inc., Newton, Mass., filed for approval of the appliance known as the Adamation Glass and Dishwashing System under the provisions of the Submerged Inlet Rules of the Board.

PROPOSED USE: Commercial dishwashing equipment.

DESCRIPTION: The basic design consists of a continuous horizontal conveyor table on which shall be driven a rack dolly conveyor. The dollies automatically pass through a glass and wishwashing machine which is an integral part of the system. The system performs four functions: Power prewash, Power wash, Power prerinse and Final rinse.

The water for the prewash is obtained from the rinse section. 180° F water having been used once for the final rinse and secondly for the power rerinse is captured in a reservoir, tempered with cold water and is then pumped to the prewashed spray arms.

The power wash in conjunction with a detergent is performed in a separate compartment and the water used is recirculated within this compartment by means of a pump.
The recirculated water is sprayed on the dishes and glass ware. The water in this tank is heated by either electric emersion heaters, stam injectors or gas.

The power prerinse is performed in a rinse compartment containing a two section tank. The final rinse water is collected in the smaller of the two section tank from where it is pumped to the prerinse section.

The final rinse is made from fresh water.

INSPECTION AND TEST: Details of construction were examined by Assistant Engineer J. A. Darts and it was noted that the fill an dsupplement lines for the power rinse and power wash tanks would require protection by means of a syphon breaker which would also protect the soap dispenser. The appliance has been approved by the Underwrit-

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recom-

Cal. No. 175-65-SA—Lennox Industries, Inc., Syracuse, New York, filed for approval of the appliance known as Lennox Combination Heating-Cooling Ventilation Units, Series GCS1 and DMS1 under the provisions of C26-191.0, Article 12, Administrative Building Code and Article 18, Chapter 19, Administrative Code.

PROPOSED USE: To provide winter heating and summer cooling.

DESCRIPTION: These units are installed on rooftop. Where space permits, they may also be installed outdoors on a slab at grade level.

They consist of a gas-fired furnace, a mechanical refrigerating system with air cooled condenser, a blower fan, filter, and operating and safety controls all encased in an insulated, weatherproof metal jacket. Combustion products are discharged above the unit through a short stack and exhaust fan.

Conditioned air is supplied to the interior of the building by suitable duct work.

The GCS1 Series are made in three basic sizes having heat input capacities from 60,000 to 150,000 BTU per hour and cooling capacities of 2, 3 and 5 tons.

The burners used in the furnace are made of aluminized steel and have continuous slot ports at which the gas is ignited by electric pilot. These burners are arranged to fire upward through porcelainized steel heat exchangers. The air to be heated is passed over these exchangers and distributed into the building by means of the blower fan and the duct work.

Electronic controls are used to shut off gas flow in 2 to 4 seconds in case of flame failure. Temperature limit controls, fan blower control and thermostats are provided.

The 2, 3 and 5 ton refrigerating systems used in these units are of the direct expansion type and are charged with R-22 refrigerant. They have a refrigerant charge of 5 lbs. 5 ozs., 8 lbs. 0 ozs., and 9 lbs. 13 ozs., respectively.

The DMS1 Series are similar to the GCS1 Series, but are larger in size and have been developed to heat, vent and cool spaces where individual control may be required for multiple zones within the same building enclosure. They are available in two sizes with heat input capacities of 350,000 and 490,000 BTU per hour maximum. The available cooling capacities are 15 and 22 tons. The refrigerant used is R-22 and the complete charge is placed into the system after its installation in the field.

INSPECTION AND TEST: All data submitted was examined by Assistant Engineer G. F. Sklenarik.

The GCS1 Series and DMS1 Series have been approved by the American Gas Association for outdoor installation.

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:

1022-65-SM—H. H. Robertson Co., New York, filed for approval of the material known as Robertson Q-Lock Q-Floor under the provisions of C26-588.0 through C26-590.0, Administrative Building Code.

PROPOSED USE: Component part of a three-hour fire resistive floor construction.

DESCRIPTION: The sections are known as QL-3 and QL-UKX of the Q-Lock Q-Floor. The QL-3 is a fluted unit and the QL-UKX is a cellular unit. The deck unit is nominally 24 inches wide by 1½ inches deep. The crests are 3⅝ inches and the valleys are 2⅝ inches at the top and 2⅝ inches at the bottom. The units are formed with indentations at top, embossments at the webs and buttons at the bottom. The indentations are 1"x⅜"x3/32" and are spaced 1" on centers. The embossments are 2"x5/16"x3/32" spaced 3" on centers. The buttons are ½" diameter by 3/32" high spaced 3" on centers.

The cellular units are formed by welding a 14-16-18 gauge bottom plate to a fluted upper section.

The fluted section may be formed of 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, and 22 gauge steel. The cellular sections are designated as 18-18, 18-16, 16-16, and 16-14; the first number refers to the gauge of the fluted top and the second number to the flat bottom element.

INSPECTION AND TEST: A floor, constructed in the following manner, was tested at the Underwriters Laboratories in accordance with the requirements of C26-588.0 through C26-590.0, Administrative Building Code.

The steel form units, arranged in an alternating pattern of one cellular section and one fluted section, are first installed and welded to the structural supports. The trench header duct, 2½ inches deep by 18 inches wide, is placed on top of and perpendicular to the span of the steel form units. The standard header duct, 1½ inches deep, is then installed in the same manner and is fastened to the steel form units by means of metal brackets. Concrete, of 3000 p.s.i. strength, is then poured over the steel form units to a depth of 2½ inches above the top plane of the floor units. The concrete needs to be vibrated in order to fill the valleys under the trench and standard header ducts.

The sprayed fireproofing, known as Type D III, as manufactured by United States Mineral Products Co., Stanhope, New Jersey, is then applied to all exposed steel surface, both deck and structural beam. Before applying the fireproofing, all steel surfaces must be wetted down. The thickness of the fireproofing to the steel is as follows:

Steel Beam—all surfaces—¾ inch.

General Ceiling Area

Valley and flat plates—⅝ inch

Crests of steel form units—½ inch

Under Trench Header

Valley and Flat Plates—1½ inch

Crests—1-5/16 inch

Under Standard Header

Valley and Flat Plates—⅞ inch

Crests—1⅝ inch

The construction met the limiting temperature criteria at 2-hours and 26 minutes.

Underwriters' Laboratories conducted an engineering study and ran four smaller scale tests in order to determine what added thickness of fireproofing would be required in order to achieve a three-hour fire resistive rating for the deck. The required thickness to achieve a three-hour rating is as follows:

Steel Beam—all surfaces—¾ inch

General Ceiling Area

Valley and flat plates—½ inch

Crests—11/16 inches

Under Trench Header

Valley and flat plates—1⅝ inches

Crests—1-5/16 inches

Under Standard Header

Valley and flat plates—⅞ inches

Crests—1¼ inches

The average density of the fireproofing is 14 lbs./cu. ft. The construction is in conformity with Dwg. R 2689-7, which is on file with and which is part of the record.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the material known as Robertson Q-Lock Q-Floor as a component part of a three-hour fire resistive floor construction, on condition that the construction be as herein described; that the concrete used shall be sand, gravel concrete having a strength of 3000 p.s.i.; that the thickness of the fireproofing shall be as described in this report under the heading: "The required thickness to achieve a three-hour rating is as follows": That the steel deck units be limited to the QL-3 and QL-UKX sections. All plans submitted to the Department of Buildings showing the proposed use of this construction shall be labeled: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. H. H. Robertson Co., New York, requested that the resolution adopted March 29, 1966, under Cal. No. 1022-65-SM, be reopened and amended so as to permit the approved floor construction to be used as composite floor and composite beam systems.

PROPOSED USE: Composite floor and beam system.

DESCRIPTION: The material Q-Lock Floor Units have been approved under Cal. No. 448-40-SM, and the use of these units have been approved under Cal. No. 1022-65-SM, as a component part of a three-hour fire resistive floor. This requested amendment is to permit the approved floor units to be used with approved shear connectors for composite floor and beam system.

INSPECTION AND TEST: A series of composite beam tests using Q-Lock Q-Floor in 20 gauge sections were conducted at the H. H. Robertson plant, Ambridge, Pa. The tests were certified by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratories and were witnessed by William A. Nolan, Director, Board of Standards and Appeals. The composite construction consisted of sand gravel 3000 p.s.i. concrete placed to a depth of 2½ inches above the top of the flutes of the floor units. (hereinafter referred to as "Adson"), for an extension of time to complete construction pursuant to section 11-322 of the Zoning Resolution of the City of New York) Petitioners, therefore, have no standing to maintain this proceeding and accordingly, the motions are granted and the petition dismissed. Settle judgment."

The record and appellants' brief must be served and filed on or before November 15, 1965."

(N.Y. Law Journal, September 15, 1965, page 20).

ACTION OF BOARD—Material approved in accordance with the report and recommendation of Committee on Test.

THE VOTE—

Affirmative: Chairman Foley, Vice Chairman Kleinert, Commissioner Fox, Commissioner Becker and Commissioner Klein 4

Negative: 0

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:

641-64-SM—Republic Steel Corp., Manufacturing Division Youngstown, Ohio, filed for approval of the material known as J Series O.T. Joists under the provisions of Local Law 51 of 1962.

PROPOSED USE: Steel joists for use in all classes of construction.

DESCRIPTION: The joists are manufactured in depth ranging from 8" to 24", inclusive. The web member is round bar ranging in diameter from 7/16" to 13/16". The top chord ranges in area from 0.425 sq. inches to 1.428 sq. inches and the lower chord from 0.357 sq. inches to 1.068 sq. inches.

The joists are designed in accordance with the Standard Specifications for Open Web Steel Joists of the Steel Joist Institute—Effective October 1, 1963.

INSPECTION AND TEST: Tests were conducted by the Department of Structural Engineering, School of Civil Engineering, Cornell University to show compliance with Local Law 51 of 1962.

The load tables submitted by the applicant are based on total load (live and dead) and it was necessary to determine what percentage of the published load would cause a deflection of 1/360 of the span. The figured loading is based on design moment for the total load, therefore the test was conducted to determine what percentage of the load would cause a deflection of 1/360, and allow that percentage the total load to be assumed as the live load. The test showed that the load required to cause a deflection of 1/360 of the span averaged 70% of their tabular load.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the material known as J Series O.T. Joists as manufactured by Republic Steel Corporation, for use in New York City when installed in accordance with the requirements of Local Law 51 of 1962. The Committee further recommends approval of the load tables for the J Series O.T. Joists as submitted in the applicant's catalog described as Republic O.T. Open Web Steel Joists, Cor-right June 1964, except that the loads shown in that catalogue being based on total load (live and dead) shall be figured on the basis of 75% of the total load as the maximum live load and 25% of that total load as the minimum dead load. It is further recommended that all plans submitted to the Department of Buildings showing the proposed use of this construction shall be labeled "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. No. 641-64-SM," and further that all bills of lading and/or shipping tickets shall be similarly marked.

COURT DECISIONS.

Matter of Small vs. Foley:—On June 23, 1965, the Board granted an extension of time to complete construction to June 23, 1965 and further to amend the resolution to permit the revised arrangement on the first floor and mezzanine under the application reopened on May 19, 1964; Calendar Number 1755-61-BZ; Premises 106 West 3rd Street, south side, 103 feet east of McDougal Street, Block 540, Lot 20, Borough of Manhattan.

At Supreme Court, Special Term, Part I, Mr. Justice Arthur Markewich ruled as follows:

"Upon the papers before it, the court holds that the petitioners have failed to demonstrate adequately the manner in which they were specially damaged, prejudiced, or harmed as a result of the Board's authorization of an extension of time to complete construction (see Matter of Brunswick [Foley] N.Y.L.J., January 7, 1965, p. 18, col. 7). Under the circumstances, petitioners have failed to indicate they they have standing to maintain this proceeding (Matter of Moore v. Burchell, 14 App. Div. 2d 572; Matter of Blum v. Board of Zoning, 8 Misc. 2d 403), and accordingly the motions are granted and the petitions dismissed. Settle order forthwith on one day's notice."

(N. Y. L. J., July 8, 1965, page 9).

The Appellate Division, First Judicial Department, By Breitel, J.P.; Rabin, Stevens, Steuer and Bastow, JJ., affirmed the Board as follows:

"9853. Law Center Foundation and N. Y. University v. Foley—Order entered on July 14 1965, unanimously affirmed with $50 costs and disbursements to the intervenors-respondents. Order filed."

The Appellate Division, First Judicial Department, By Rabin, J.P.; Valente, McNally, Eager and Bastow, JJ., rendered the following decision:

"108. Law Center Foundation and N. Y. University v. Foley—Motion to dismiss appeal dismissed, having become academic by virtue of the decision of this court on appeal No. 9853, decided therewith. All concur except Valente, J., deceased. Order filed."

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:

171-59-SM—Amendment to resolution as to added design.
 APPLICANT—KSM PRODUCTS, INC., Morrestown, New Jersey, requested that the resolution adopted November 10, 1959, under Calendar Number 171-59-SM be reopened and amended to include additional design.

PROPOSED USE: Stud is a shear connector for composite and concrete floor and/or roof construction.

DESCRIPTION: The material, a non-corroding fluxed shear connector is a round steel bar, at least 2' long, made from cold finish carbon steel conforming to ASTM A-108. It is stud welded using a ceramic arc shield especially modified for welding to structural steel members having no protective coating on top flanges through sheet metal floor and roof panels which are treated with a metal coating.

The other end is an upset head whose diameter is at least $1\frac{3}{4}$ times the diameter of the bar of $\frac{1}{2}$ inch greater than the diameter of the bar. The head prevents relative movement of the slab in a vertical direction.

The connector is fastened to the steel structure through the decking material by the KSM SAFEGUARD stud welder with controlled plunge and utilizing a DC electric arc welding process.

When installed the system combines three elements into one structural unit. The design is the same as that described in the original resolution of Cal. No. 171-59-SM.

RECOMMENDATIONS: On the basis of the data filed by the applicant, the Committee on Test recommends that the resolution adopted Nov. 10, 1959 under Calendar No. 171-59-SM and amended by resolution April 16, 1963 be reopened and amended so as to permit use of the KSM shear studs under the following conditions:

1. That the composite beam design procedure and stresses shall be as prescribed in Section C26-513 thru C26-524 and Section C26-368 except as modified herein.
2. The section properties for composite beams using H.H. Robertson Q-Deck $1\frac{1}{2}$ " deep shall be calculated by determining the conventional composite beam section properties as prescribed in the building code sections above.
 - a. When the deck is placed transversely across the beam the $1\frac{1}{2}$ " depth of concrete within the deck's ribs shall not be included in determining the concrete's effective depth.
 - b. When calculating the total deflection of the beam acting compositely the calculated value of I shall be reduced by multiplying by the factor of 0.90.
3. That the KSM stud shear connector in $\frac{3}{4}$ " and $\frac{5}{8}$ " diameter may be welded through 22, 20, 18 and 16 gauge H.H. Robertson $1\frac{1}{2}$ " Q-Decking as covered under Calendar Nos 448-40-SM and 1022-65-SM using the KSM SAFEGUARD stud welder with controlled plunge and special arc shield for welding through decking under the conditions as herein set forth.
4. All work shall be performed under the supervision of a licensed professional engineer in accordance with the manufacturers recommendation, and shall meet the requirements of the Administrative Building Code and the Rules of the Board.

That all other pertinent requirements of the resolution adopted Nov. 10, 1959 under Cal. No. 171-59-SM and its first amendment by resolution adopted April 16, 1963 except as changed or modified herein be complied with.

261-54-SM—Amendment to resolution as to additional use of wall-tees.

Dur-O-Wal Products Inc., New York, requested that the resolution adopted January 21, 1958 and as amended through June 16, 1964 under Cal. No. 261-54-SM be reopened and amended so as to permit the approved material to be used in lieu of headers under C26-424.0 Administrative Building Code.

PROPOSED USE: Metal reinforcing for use in masonry walls.

DESCRIPTION: The material Dur-O-Wall was approved by the Board on January 21, 1958 under the provisions of C26-430 and C26-431.0 Administrative Building Code. The request is to permit the use of this reinforcement for bonding solid masonry walls under C26-424.0 Administrative Building Code.

INSPECTION AND TEST: The applicant has submitted a report of tests conducted by Armour and Research Foundation of Illinois Institute of Technology. The conclusions reached were as follows:

Compression tests—1. The initial failure load is not affected by the type of wall tie, header brick or metal tie. 2. After initial failure the wire ties are more effective in holding the wall together than the brick header ties. 3. The S tie tends to be more effective than special ties.

Vertical transverse tests—metal reinforcement is as effective as brick headers in tying the walls against lateral wind loading.

Weather tightness. Metal reinforced walls are more effective than brick headers in the ability to stop penetration of water.

The complete report is on file with and is part of the record.

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:
180-58-SM—Amendment to resolution as to added design. Gregory Industries, Inc., Lorain, Ohio requested that the resolution adopted December 2, 1958 under Cal. No. 180-58-SM and amended September 29, 1964 be reopened and amended to include Nelson solid flux studs in addition to the Nelson granular studs originally approved. Also that both studs be used in conjunction with metal decks.

PROPOSED USE: Studs are shear connectors for composite and concrete floor and/or roof construction.

DESCRIPTION: There has been no change in the method of welding as approved in the original resolution. It is stud welded to structural members having no protective coating on top flange through sheet metal floor and roof panels which are treated with a metal coating. However the material has changed in that a solid flux filled stud is to be included in this amendment.

Tests covering the solid flux studs were performed under the supervision of Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory and Case Institute of Technology. The tests met the requirements of the Bureau of Public Roads U.S. Dept. of Commerce.

In fastening these studs (or connectors) to the steel structure through the decking material a motor generator is used with a Nelson Stud Welding Gun and Control. The tests cover installation of studs with black iron galvanized and painted metal decks. The design is the same as that described in the original resolution of Cal. No. 180-58-SM.

APPLICANT—Aerovent Fan Company, Inc., owner.

APPEARANCES—

ACTION OF BOARD—Appliance approved in accordance with the report and recommendation of Committee on Test.

Affirmative: Commissioner Becker and Commissioner Klein 2

Negative: Vice-Chairman Kleinert and Commissioner Fox 2

Absent: Chairman Foley 1

THE VOTE OF APRIL 26, 1966—

Affirmative: Chairman Foley 1

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads: Cal. No. 42-63-SA—Aerovent Fan Company, Inc., Piqua, Ohio, filed for approval of the appliance known as Aerovent Gas-Fired Air Make-up under the provisions of C26-191.0 and Article 12, Chap. 26 Administrative Building Code.

PROPOSED USE: To supply heated air to factory areas in which mechanical exhaust used in process work such as paint spraying, paint baking, etc., exhausts and excessive quantity of the regular heat supply.

DESCRIPTION: The Aerovent Gas-Fired Air Make-up Unit is a self-contained package having a fan, either centrifugal or propeller type, a specially designed direct fired air heater and an operating and safety control system.

The unit is designed for tempering outside air and supplying it into the building at a temperature approximately the same as room temperature.

The burner is a Maxon pre-mix using natural gas as fuel.

Two systems of temperature control are available. An outlet temperature control provides a constant average temperature at the discharge grill of the unit and holds this to the outside air temperature varies. The other, a room temperature control, is used with a motorized safety shut-off valve and provides modulated control from a room temperature thermostat.

Safety controls include low and high air temperature limit switches, shutter and switch which starts the fan when the shutter reaches full open position to permit flow of air, low and high gas pressure limit switches, an air flow switch to stop the unit if air flow is insufficient and a combustion safeguard relay which controls electric ignition and gas pilot and energizes an automatic gas safety shutoff valve starting the burner only after pilot light is on. It closes the gas valve in case of power or flame failure and locks out on safety if flame is not proven. It has a manual reset.

These make-up units are to be installed either on the roof or with the air intake through the roof or sidewall, so that all combustion air is taken from outdoors with no recirculation. They are made in various air handling capacities and Btu ratings as required.

INSPECTION AND TEST: All details were examined by Assistant Engineer G. F. Sklenarik.

Prior tests of the Maxon Premix burners used in make-up air heaters have indicated that even with maladjustment of the burner, the concentration of carbon monoxide in the heated air supplied from the unit was less 1/10 the maximum allowable concentration for 8 hours of 100 parts per million. In normal burner operation, no carbon monoxide was detected.

The amount of air used is sufficiently large to keep the carbon dioxide content well below the permissible limit.

The unit has been approved by the State Board of Standards and Appeals, BSA-AP-4594. Individual installations in various locations have been accepted by Factory Mutuals or Factory Insurance Association.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as Aerovent Gas-Fired Make-up Unit for use in New York City to supply heated air to replace air being exhausted through process equipment, provided that the exhaust system and air heater are electrically interlocked so that the heater cannot be operated unless the exhaust is in operation. With the exception of a flue connection, the heater installation shall conform to Article 12, Chap. 26, Administrative Building Code and the Paint Spray Rules of the Board where they are applicable. Each heater shall bear a label, permanently affixed, reading: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. No. 42-63-SA".

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:

453-65-SA—York-Shipley, Inc., York, Pa., filed for approval of the appliance known as Jackson and Church Make Up Air Heaters, Models MU-40 through MU-500 under the provisions of C26-191.0 and Article 12, Chapter 26 Administrative Building Code.

PROPOSED USE: Appliance to supply heated air to industrial and commercial installations.

MINUTES

DESCRIPTION: The appliances are gas fired warm air furnaces. The BTU input ranges from 264,000 to 5,500,000 BTU/hr.

The appliance is a self-contained unit having a fan, direct fired air heater and safety control system.

The burner used is a Mid-Continent Metal Products Co., approved by the Board under Cal. 770-55-SA.

The control system allows the unit to operate to heat make up air or to operate in the summer for air circulation.

The high limit control is preset at 160° F. but may be set at lower temperatures if desired.

The operation of the control system is such that the blowers will operate for a sufficient time before ignition of the burners to circulate three unit volumes of air through the unit.

The control system is arranged to electrically interlock the exhaust system so that the heater cannot be operated unless the exhaust system is in operation and the exhaust system interlock contacts must be closed before the unit can operate.

The start button, when pressed, starts the damper motor which opens the air inlet damper. End switch contacts close when the damper is open and energizes the blower motor-starter thereby starting the unit blowers.

The air flow proving switch contacts close which insures that air flow through the unit has been established.

The gas high pressure switch contacts are normally closed; however, if the gas pressure is too high the contacts will open and prevent the burner from igniting.

The high temperature limit control switch is normally closed allowing the burner to ignite if the outside air temperature control is calling for burner operation. The high temperature limit control is a manual reset type requiring manual reset in case the contacts of this control open, due to the temperature leaving the unit being higher than the control setting.

When the limit circuit controls are complete, the ignition transformer is energized and the main gas valve is opened.

Presence of flame is proven by the flame rod and the main gas valve remains open. Should flame not be established the main gas valve closes.

Should the flame go out, the ignition transformer is re-energized and if flame is not re-established within 15 seconds, the main gas valve is closed and a manual reset is required.

If the pilot is not proven by the flame rod, the ignition transformer is de-energized.

If the main flame goes out, the main gas and pilot valve close and a manual reset is needed to start the burner.

INSPECTION AND TEST: The appliance has been approved by the State Board of Standards and Appeals under No. 4836.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as Jackson & Church Make-Up Air Heaters, Models MU-40 through MU-500, for use in New York City to supply heated air to replace air being exhausted through process equipment, provided that the exhaust system and the air heater are electrically interlocked so that the heaters cannot be operated unless the exhaust is in operation. ACTION OF BOARD—Appliance approved in accordance with the report and recommendation of Committee on Test.

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads: 822-65-SA—R. Lisson for Mesco Heat Exchangers, A Division of Marine Engine Specialties Corp., Kearny, New Jersey, filed for approval of the appliance known as Mesco Type VTH Vertical U-Tube Fuel Oil Heater under the provisions of the Oil Burner Rules of the Board.

PROPOSED USE: Preheater for fuel oil.

DESCRIPTION: The heater consists of a steel pipe shell containing a steel "U" tube bundle with the tube ends roller expanded into a steel tube sheet. A steel support sheet, welded to the heater pipe shell is bolted to the ring of an access manhole at the top of the storage tank, with the entire preheater assembly suspended vertically into the storage tank.

At the bottom of the pipe shell is an oil mixing chamber containing connections for the hot oil return line.

The heating medium connections are contained in a chamber, either cast iron or steel, bolted to the top flange of the heater shell. The steel tube sheet is also bolted to the same top shell flange, between it and the heating medium chamber. The oil outlet connection at the top of the heater shell is placed above the heater support plate resting on the tank manifold ring.

The operation of the heater is as follows:

1) Oil Cycle—This being a tank suction heater, it is installed in the suction line of the system oil pump. The cold oil from the storage is drawn into the mixing chamber at the bottom of the heater by the system suction pump. Here it mixes with the hot oil being brought back to the heater through the system oil return line, thus providing a measure of preheat even before the oil heating tubes are reached.

As the oil rises through the shell of the heater, it comes in contact with the tubes through which the heating medium is being circulated.

2) Heating medium cycle—If the heating medium is either hot water or steam boiler, it is mandatory that a separate heat exchanger be used to maintain the heating medium at the proper temperature level. No direct connection is made between the water or steam space of a boiler and the "U" tube bundle of the suction heater.

INSPECTION AND TEST: Details of construction were examined by Assistant Engineer J. A. Darts. The design working pressure on the tube side is 150 p.s.i. and on the shell 15 p.s.i. and they are hydrostatic tested by 225 p.s.i. and 25 p.s.i.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as Mesco Type VTH Vertical U-Tube Fuel Oil Heater for use in New York City when installed in accordance with the Oil Burner Rules of the Board. Each heater shall bear a label, permanently affixed, reading: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. 822-65-SA".

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:

171-59-SM—Amendment to resolution as to added design.

APPLICANT—KSM PRODUCTS, INC., Moorestown, New Jersey, requested that the resolution adopted November 10, 1959, under Calendar Number 171-59-SM be reopened and amended to include additional design.

PROPOSED USE: Stud is a shear connector for composite and concrete floor and/or roof construction.

DESCRIPTION: The material, a non-corroding fluxed shear connector is a round steel bar, at least 2' long, made from cold finish carbon steel conforming to ASTM A-108, It is stud welded using a ceramic arc shield especially modified for welding to structural steel members having no protective coating on top flanges through sheet metal floor and roof panels which are treated with a metal coating.

The other end is an upset head whose diameter is at least $1\frac{3}{4}$ times the diameter of the bar of $\frac{1}{2}$ inch greater than the diameter of the bar. The head prevents relative movement of the slab in a vertical direction.

The connector is fastened to the steel structure through the decking material by the KSM SAFEGUARD stud welder with controlled plunge and utilizing a DC electric arc welding process.

When installed the system combines three elements into one structural unit. The design is the same as that described in the original resolution of Cal. No. 171-59-SM.

RECOMMENDATIONS: On the basis of the data filed by the applicant, the Committee on Test recommends that the resolution adopted Nov. 10, 1959 under Calendar No.

171-59-SM and amended by resolution April 16, 1963 be reopened and amended so as to permit use of the KSM shear studs under the following conditions:

1. That the composite beam design procedure and stresses shall be as prescribed in Section C26-513 thru C26-524 and Section C26-368 except as modified herein.

2. The section properties for composite beams using H.H. Robertson Q-Deck $1\frac{1}{2}$ " deep shall be calculated by determining the conventional composite beam section properties as prescribed in the building code sections above.

a. When the deck is placed transversely across the beam the $1\frac{1}{2}$ " depth of concrete within the deck's ribs shall not be included in determining the concrete's effective depth.

b. When calculating the total deflection of the beam acting compositely the calculated value of I shall be reduced by multiplying by the factor of 0.90.

3. That the KSM stud shear connector in $\frac{3}{4}$ " and $\frac{5}{8}$ " diameter may be welded through 22, 20, 18 and 16 gauge H.H. Robertson $1\frac{1}{2}$ " Q-Decking as covered under Calendar Nos 448-40-SM and 1022-65-SM using the KSM SAFEGUARD stud welder with controlled plunge and special arc shield for welding through decking under the conditions as herein set forth. No stud shall be welded through two thicknesses of the deck.

4. All work shall be performed under the supervision of a licensed professional engineer in accordance with the manufacturers recommendation, and shall meet the requirements of the Administrative Building Code and the Rules of the Board.

That all other pertinent requirements of the resolution adopted Nov. 10, 1959 under Cal. No. 171-59-SM and its first amendment by resolution adopted April 16, 1963 except as changed or modified herein be complied with.

The Quaker RVFA models have changed from a Robertshaw to a Honeywell automatic gas valve and the color of the casing is now walnut instead of beige. This change is denoted by the suffix "1" after the model number.

On the Quaker BVF series of room heaters, the casing color is changed from beige to mahogany and the Honeywell automatic gas valve model has been changed from their V-5166C with 1/2" inlet and outlet to their V-5269A with 1/2" inlet and 3/8" outlet. The added suffix "TH" after the model number indicates the change.

On the Kenmore 837.5850 series, the same automatic gas valve change as stated above for the Quaker BVF series was made and the suffix "H" was added to indicate the change. The casing color is still beige.

There are six (6) new Kenmore models: 837.550530, 837.550930, 837.550550, 837.550950, 837.550570, and 837.550970. These new Kenmore models are basically the same as the presently approved 837.5850 series, except the new Honeywell model V-5269A automatic gas valve 1/2" inlet and 3/8" outlet will replace their V-5166C, 1/2" inlet and outlet. The casing color is mahogany instead of beige, the upper front grille is ivory instead of gold, the decorative control panel has been redesigned for appearance.

All above room heaters have been approved by the American Gas Association.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends that the resolution adopted July 9, 1957 and amended through January 29, 1963, under Calendar Number 552-55-SA, be reopened and amended so as to permit change of gas valve in the Quaker RVFA models; Quaker BVF series; Kenmore 837.5850 Series; and to include additional Kenmore models 837.550530, 837.550930, 837.550550, 837.550950, 837.550570, and 837.550970, on condition that the resolution adopted July 9, 1957 and amended through January 29, 1963, under Calendar Number 552-55-SA, be complied with.

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads: 703-60-SA—The DeVilbiss Co., Toledo, Ohio, filed for approval of the appliance known as DeVilbiss Gas Fired Oven Series TG under the provisions of the Paint Spraying Rules of the Board.

PROPOSED USE: Paint drying oven.

DESCRIPTION: The oven is a gas fired, batch type oven fabricated from insulated double walled sheet metal panels to form an enclosure which precludes the direct application of flame to the materials in process.

Double doors are provided at the entrance and/or exit end of the oven and the doors are provided with explosion relief latches.

A centrifugal type exhaust fan is connected to the oven to insure that the percentage of solvent vapor, during the drying process, does not exceed $\frac{1}{4}$ the low explosive limit of the solvent used.

The burner will be of either the atmospheric or Premix direct fired type.

All motors are of the induction type, non sparking, drip proof design.

The following controls are located in a control cabinet attached to the side wall of the cabinet: Main disconnect switch, control transformer, magnetic starter for circulating fan, magnetic starter for premix unit, start stop button and signal light for premix unit, start stop button and signal light for recirculating fan, push button and signal light to indicate cycle timer, flame rod assembly and flame relay.

The following controls are located outside of the control cabinet: Air flow switch for circulating fan, air flow switch for exhaust fan, safety shut off valve, low gas pressure switch, pilot burner assembly, pilot solenoid valve, temperature high limit switch and door switch for each double door.

The controls are arranged and connected to insure that

A) A minimum of four oven volume changes with fresh air will be provided before the ignition system can be energized and the gas flow started.

B) The gas flow will be shut off when

- 1) The circulating and/or exhaust fan is inoperative.
- 2) Ignition fails.
- 3) Gas pressure drops.
- 4) Current is interrupted.
- 5) Temperature exceeds preset maximum.

C) The gas flow to the pilot will shut off when the flame is extinguished or the supply of gas is cut off.

D) Burner will be turned down to low fire when a double entrance or exit door is opened.

INSPECTION AND TEST: Details of construction were examined by Assistant Engineer John A. Darts.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as DeVilbiss Gas Fired Oven Series G for use in New York City when installed and operated in accordance with the Paint Spraying Rules of the Board. Each oven shall bear a label, permanently affixed, reading: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. 703-60-SA."

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads: 704-60-SA—The DeVilbiss Co., Toledo, Ohio, filed for approval of the appliance known as DeVilbiss Gas Fired Heated Air Supply System under the provisions of Article 12, Chapter 26, Administration Building Code.

PROPOSED USE: To supply heated air to factory areas in which mechanical exhaust used in process work such as paint spraying, paint baking etc., exhausts an excessive quantity of the regular heat supply.

DESCRIPTION: The gas fired, heated air supply systems are fabricated from 18 gauge panels supported by a structural steel base frame work.

Outside air is drawn through a screen and through louvres, mounted in the inlet of the ducts connecting the system to the out-of-doors; or directly attached to the entrance end of the system. This air is then passed over a Premix or Eclipse direct gas fired, burner where the air temperature is elevated to approximately 90°F.

The warmed air is pushed into a system of discharge ducts by a centrifugal blower or blowers mounted on a single shaft and powered by an induction type, non-sparking drip proof motor through a "V" belt drive.

The discharge direct is designed to circulate the tempered air to an area or to a discharge plenum chamber connected to the inlet of an exhaust system.

The controls consists of the following components located in a control cabinet attached to the side wall of the enclosure: Main disconnect switch, fuse blocks and fuses, step down transformer, Magnetic motor starters, magnetic relays, electronic flame relay, pilot ignition transformer and start stop button.

The following controls are located outside the control cabinet: Main gas cock, gas regulator, pressure gauge, safety shut-off valve with micro switch, test cock, Maxon Airflo mixer, temperature control motor-modulating, temperature controller, air flow switch and pilot solenoid valve.

The controls are connected and arranged to insure that

A) The burners can only be started by an operator standing alongside the gas equipment.

B) Gas can be ignited and will remain lighted only as long as all fans are operating at rated capacity.

C) Failure of any fan will shutoff all gas.

D) Rise of heated air to 140°F will shut off all gas.

E) Gas cannot be supplied to burners until pilot flame is burning.

F) Extinguishing of pilot flame or failure of the gas supply pressure will shutoff all gas.

G) Once any of the safety equipment has acted to shut-off the gas, the manual reset valve must be reset by operator at the equipment.

H) Thermostats and solenoid valves will prevent turning on the heaters if the outside air temperature is such as to preclude the need for heat.

Prior tests of the Maxon Premix burners used in make-up air heaters have indicated that even with maladjustment of the burner, the concentration of carbon monoxide in the heated air supplied from the unit was less 1/10 the maximum allowable concentration for 8 hours of 100 parts per million. In normal burner operation, no carbon monoxide was detected.

The amount of air used is sufficiently large to keep the carbon dioxide content well below the permissible limit.

INSPECTION AND TEST: Details of construction were examined by Assistant Engineer John A. Darts.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as DeVilbiss Gas Fired Heated Air Supply System for use in New York City to supply heated air to replace air being exhausted through process equipment, provided that the exhaust system and air heater are electrically interlocked so that the heater cannot be operated unless the exhaust is in operation and that all air for combustion shall be ducted in from outside. With the exception of a flue connection, the heater installation shall comply with the requirements of Article 12, Chapter 26, Administrative Building Code and the Paint Spray Rules of the Board where they are applicable. Each heater—shall bear a label, permanently affixed, reading: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. 704-60-SA."

Cal. No. 545-65-SA—Detrex Chemical Industries, Inc., Detroit, Mich., filed for approval of the appliance known as Econ-O-Perk Detrex Model 16 Solvent Vapor Recovery Machine under the provisions of the Rules Covering Coin-Operated and Non-Coin Operated Dry Cleaning Establishments.

PROPOSED USE: To absorb dry cleaning solvent vapors (perchlorethylene).

DESCRIPTION: The Econ-O-Perk machine is made of 10 gauge sheet steel-all welded construction.

The exhaust fans of the dry cleaning machine, the solvent recovery tumbler and floor pickup ducts are manifolded into an adequate size duct and connected to the inlet of the fans of the Econ-O-Perk unit. These fans direct the air through a bed of activated carbon which absorbs the solvent vapors present and allows vapor free air to be discharged to atmosphere.

When the unit has reached its retention capacity approximately 2 gallons, the solvent can be reclaimed by shutting down the dry cleaning equipment and closing the dampers on the recovery unit. Low pressure steam from a separate steam boiler, is then introduced to the bottom of the saturated bed of active carbon. The solvent and steam vapors are directed over a water cooled condensing coil. The condensate flows to a water separator where the liquids are separated and the water goes to waste. The solvent is collected in a container or it can be piped to the solvent storage tank.

After steam stripping, the recovery unit is again ready for use.

INSPECTION AND TEST: All data submitted was examined by Assistant Engineer G. F. Sklenarik.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as Econ-O-Perk Detrex Model 16 Solvent Vapor Recovery Machine for use in New York City in accordance with this report, the provisions of C26-1780 Administrative Building Code and the Board's Rules Covering Coin Operated and Non-Coin Operated Dry Cleaning Establishments. Each unit is to be installed in accordance with the Electrical Code of the City of New York and each unit shall bear a label, permanently affixed, reading: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:

Cal. No. 546-65-SA—Detrex Chemical Industries, Inc., Detroit, Michigan, filed for approval of the appliance known as Detrex Statesman Dry Cleaning Machine, Model 570, under the provisions of the Board's Rules Covering Non-Coin-Operated Dry Cleaning Establishments.

PROPOSED USE: A dry cleaning machine using perchlorethylene solvent.

DESCRIPTION: The Model 570 dry cleaner is similar to the Model 423 previously approved under Cal. No. 34-64-SA, except that it is a larger unit and will wash and extract only. A separate approved drying unit will be used to complete the cleaning operation.

The equipment consists essentially of an open-pocket drum into which the garments to be cleaned are placed.

MINUTES

The drum is enclosed in a tub provided with a hinged solvent-tight loading door through which the garments to be cleaned are loaded into and unloaded from the drum.

After the garments are placed in the drum and the loading door locked closed, the timer dial is set by selecting the duration of the wash cycle. The tub is automatically filled with solvent and clear filtered solvent flows into the tub and out of the overflow throughout the wash cycle. Following the wash cycle, the drain and extract cycles are performed under the control of a sequence timer.

At the end, the machine automatically comes to rest, at which time the garments can be removed from the drum and placed in the dryer.

The loading door is locked shut with a yoke interlocked with safety controls. This safety switch, when actuated by opening the loading door, automatically de-energizes the drive motor. It also starts the exhaust fan and orients the dampers and air is pulled through the loading door and exhausted to the outside.

The drycleaning machine consists of a 36" diameter drum, fabricated of stainless steel all welded construction. This drum is mounted on a fabricated spider and a heavy stub shaft. This shaft is supported by two anti-friction ball bearing pillow blocks.

The rotating drum is enclosed in a 10 gauge sheet steel tub, reinforced with structural steel all welded construction. Multiple coats of phenolic corrosion resistant material are applied to the tub interior. The tub and housing are mounted on a combination base—solvent storage tank. Also mounted on the storage tank is a single two-speed motor which drives the drum through the wash and extract cycles.

By means of a timer and motor reversing contactor, the drum reverses its direction of rotation every eight (8) seconds during the wash and recovery cycles. The drive motor is rated .66/2 HP, revolving the drum at wash speed of 41 RPM at .66 HP and 2 HP at drum extraction speed of 523 RPM.

Also mounted on the base storage tank is a 1 HP 3450 RPM filter pump of the self-priming centrifugal type. Adjacent to the pump is a metal cylinder enclosed multi-tube solvent filter with glass viewing panels. This filter is completely automatic. The valving that carries the filter through backwash, pre-coat, clear-up, to on stream filtering are programmed through timers and electric motor-driven valve operators.

The filter is backwashed into a centrifuge bag. At the completion of a normal day's operation, the spent filter aid is spun in the centrifuge. In this manner, practically all of the solvent is removed and the powder is dry. Spent filter powder is removed within the centrifuge bag from the system. The centrifuge is mounted on the base—storage tank and is driven by a 1 HP 1620 RPM motor.

INSPECTION AND TEST: All data submitted was examined by Assistant Engineer G. F. Sklenarik.

The washer drum is 36" in diameter and 23" deep with a volume of 13.55 cubic feet. Based on 2.8 lbs. per cubic foot, its load capacity is 38 lbs.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as Detrex Statesman Dry Cleaning Machine, Model 570, for use in New York City when installed in accordance with the requirements of the Board's Rules Covering Non-Coin-Operated Dry Cleaning Establishments and the Zoning Resolution provided that each machine shall bear a label, permanently affixed, reading: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:
700-65-SM—Sudbury Laboratory, Sudbury, Mass., filed for approval of the material known as Aqua-Clear Feeder under the provisions of C26-191.0 Administrative Building Code.

PROPOSED USE: Device to prevent rust, corrosion and scale.

DESCRIPTION: The feeder ranges in size from $\frac{3}{4}$ inch water supply line to 20 inch water supply line using from 7 lbs. to 12,000 lbs. of chemical to fill the feeder.

The shell is of steel and inside the shell is placed a perforated basket in which are placed the slow dissolving crystals. The perforations in the basket permit the water to circulate around the crystal. A baffle is also inserted within the shell which directs the incoming water downward around the crystals, crossing over at the bottom and flowing upward on the outlet side.

The crystals, known as Aqua-Clear is an inorganic alkali made up of the following constituents: Aluminum, boron, calcium, chromium, copper, iron, magnesium, manganese, silicon, silver, sodium and titanium. The material can be described as anodic and cathodic in its action, inasmuch as its basic constituent represents cathodic inhibiting but the results and reactions are that of an anodic inhibitor.

The active ingredients in the crystal have a positive affinity for metallic oxides it contacts in water solution.

The thin film it deposits on a metal surface does two things to prevent rust and scale. First, as the film is impervious enough to keep oxygen from coming in contact with the metal, no further oxide can form. Second, the film is an electrical insulator and stops any flow of electric current, which must be present when metallic corrosion takes place.

INSPECTION AND TEST: The feeder was tested by the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity and the report states that as the total alkalinity, hardness and silica contents of the water after treatment with Aqua-Clear does not exceed 50 ppm as stipulated in the New York City Health Code (Sect. 141.07), this Department finds the Aqua-Clear feeder satisfactory.

The feeder has been approved by City of Los Angeles. RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the material known as Aqua-Clear Feeder as manufactured by Sudbury Laboratory for use in New York City in compliance with C26-191.0 Administrative Building Code and the Submerged Inlet Rules of the Board. The feeder shall bear a label, permanently affixed, reading: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. 700-65-SM." PROPOSED USE: Ceiling fireproofing in fire rated floor-ceiling assemblies. Interior incombustible finish.

DESCRIPTION: The wallboard is incombustible and is identical to the material previously approved under Cal. No.

MINUTES

586-64-SM, except that it is $\frac{1}{2}$ " thick whereas the previously approved material was $\frac{5}{8}$ " thick.

INSPECTION AND TEST: Fire resistance tests as herein described were conducted in accordance with the at Underwriters' Laboratories, Chicago, and one was conducted under C26-588.0 through C26-590.0 and C26-590.0 at the National Gypsum Research Test Center, Buffalo, which was witnessed by a Committee on Test consisting of Chairman Foley, Commissioner Plein and Director Nolan. The test reports hereinafter referenced have been filed with and are part of the record.

In the construction tested under U. L. R3501-28, the floor consisted of $2\frac{1}{2}$ " sand-gravel concrete on $\frac{3}{8}$ " rib metal lath, previously approved under Cal. No. 342-39-SM, over steel joists spaced 24" o.c. Gold Bond Drywall Furring Channels, previously approved under Cal. No. 439-52-SM, were attached directly to the lower chords of the steel joists with double strands of 18 gage tie wire and were spaced 24" o.c.

The $\frac{1}{2}$ " Gold Bond Fire-Shield (type X) Gypsum Wallboard was installed below attached to the furring channels with 1" self-drilling sheet metal screws spaced 12" o.c. Additional sections of furring channels were used at wallboard end joists which occurred between the main furring channels. Joints and screw heads may be exposed or covered with a joint compound system. The assembly met all criteria for a 2-hour fire resistive rating; failure occurred at 2-hours and 31 minutes. The floor-ceiling assembly tested under U. L. R3501-46 was identical to R3501-28, described above, except there was a steel beam within the ceiling plenum and the Drywall Furring Channels were attached to $1\frac{1}{2}$ " cold rolled steel carrying channels, previously approved under Cal. No. 342-39-SM, spaced 48" o.c. that were suspended below the steel joists by 12 gage wire hangers spaced 48" o.c. The floor-ceiling and steel beam met all criteria for 2-hour fire resistive ratings. The floor-ceiling assembly tested under FC-14 consisted of $2\frac{1}{2}$ " sand-gravel concrete over a blend steel deck (fluted and cellular) supported by a steel beam. The ceiling fireproofing consisted of $\frac{1}{2}$ " Gold Bond Fire-Shield (type X) Gypsum Wallboard that was suspended below the steel deck by 12 gage wire hangers as described above under U.L. R3501-46.

The floor-ceiling met all criteria for a 2-hour and the beam a 3-hour fire resistive rating.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends approval for use of the material now known as $\frac{1}{2}$ " Gold Bond Fire-Shield (type X) Gypsum Wallboard as incombustible interior finish where a fire rating is not required and for use as ceiling fireproofing in 2-hour fire resistive roof or floor-ceiling and 2-hour or 3-hour beam assemblies as hereinbefore described with the provision that 12 gauge wires may be used to support the suspended ceilings, provided the ceilings are not suspended more than 6 inches below the lower plane of the floor units or steel joists, but that if the ceiling is more than 6 inches below the lower plane of the floor units or steel joists then straps as required under C26-461.0, Administrative Building Code shall be used instead of the wire hangers, on condition that all plans submitted to the Department of Buildings showing the proposed use of any of these constructions shall be stamped: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. No. 740-65-SM", and all bundles or pieces of $\frac{1}{2}$ " Gold Bond Fire-Shield (type X) Gypsum Wallboard shall be similarly marked.

PROPOSED USE: Ballcock.

DESCRIPTION: The material is a bottom supply ballcock for closet tank installation. The ballcock consists of a shank and riser pipe on the terminal end of which is a plastic (Delrin) housing containing the water shut-off mechanism and the anti syphon features. This housing is capped with a brass casting.

The anti syphon feature is on the lower side of the housing and has three $\frac{1}{8}$ inch slots which are the air relief ports. The ports are sealed against spilling the incoming water by a Buna-N diaphragm. This diaphragm seats against the ports under water pressure and under vacuum, the diaphragm is pulled away from the ports.

The discharge of the ballcock is through a separate hush tube which delivers the water to the bottom of the closet tank. The refill discharge is through an opening in the plastic housing into which a refill tube is connected.

The ballcock is actuated by the rise and fall of the water in the tank by means of the standard float ball, lever and plunger arrangement.

Cal. No. 1228-65-SM—The United States Gypsum Company, New York, filed for approval of the 5/8" thickness of Firecode Type C Fire Resistive Gypsum Wallboard which is made plain, decorated, insulating, vinyl coated, and water resistant.

PROPOSED USE: As a wallboard for incombustible finishes and as part of fire rated assemblies for partitions, floor ceiling assemblies, and for fireproofing of steel beams, columns, barjoists and ducts.

DESCRIPTION: This Type C Fire Resistive Wallboard is incombustible and is basically identical with the material previously approved under Cal. 486-39-SM—Vols. This is accomplished by adding glass fibers and vermiculite aggregate to the core. In the field, Type C may be readily identified by the presence of the glass fibers of a cut end which sparkle when held up to the light and the fine black specs of the vermiculite aggregate. For Applicant: E. Vincent Salvo.

ACTION OF BOARD—Material approved in accordance with the report and recommendation of Committee on Test.

THE VOTE—

Affirmative: Chairman Foley, Commissioner Becker and Commissioner Klein 3

Negative: Vice Chairman Kleinert and Commissioner Fox 2

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:

1227-65-SM—The United States Gypsum Company, New York, filed for approval of the ½" thickness of Firecode Type C Fire Resistive Gypsum Wallboard which is made plain, decorated, insulating, vinyl coated, and water resistant.

PROPOSED USE: As a wallboard for incombustible finishes and as part of fire rated assemblies for partitions, floor ceiling assemblies, and for fireproofing of steel beams, columns, barjoists, and ducts.

DESCRIPTION: This Type C Fire Resistive Wallboard is incombustible and is basically identical with the material previously approved under Cal. No. 486-39-SM—Vols. I and II, as standard wallboard and the more fire resistant Type X Firecode Wallboard approved under Cal. No. 171-52-SM, except that Type C is more highly fire resistant than any of these. This is accomplished by adding glass fibers and vermiculite aggregate to the core. In the field, Type C may be readily identified by the presence of the glass fibers of a cut end which sparkle when held up to the light and the fine black specs of the vermiculite aggregate. In addition, all ½" thick Type C Fire Resistive Wallboard will carry Underwriters' Label showing Class C and in addition, each sheet will bear imprinted on the edge this Cal. No. 1227-65-SM.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the super fire resistive gypsum wallboard in ½" thickness known as U.S. Gypsum Company Firecode C, in plain, decorated, water resistant, foil backed, or vinyl coated form as an incombustible finish or as a component part of a fire rated assembly, each board is stamped, labeled or imprinted: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City under Cal. No. 1227-65-SM", for use in all classes of construction and further, provided that where the fire resistive gypsum board Firecode Type C is used as a component part of a fire rated assembly, the Calendar Number of that assembly as hereafter tested and approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals shall be shown on the plans submitted to the New York City Building Department for approval and two copies of the Board's approvals of the assembly shall also be submitted with the plans.

CORRECTION

*CORRECTION

That portion of the minutes of the Board of Standards and Appeals held on April 7, 1964 as they appeared in Bulletin No. 16 Volume 49 are hereby corrected to read as follows:

620-63-SM

APPLICANT—United States Steel Corporation, American Bridge Division, owner.

APPEARANCES—

For Applicant: H. R. Connor, Jr., and C. H. Scranton.

ACTION OF BOARD—Material approved in accordance with the report and recommendation of Committee on Test.

THE VOTE—

Affirmative: Chairman Foley, Commissioner Fox, Commissioner Becker and Commissioner Klein 4

Negative: Vice Chairman Kleinert 1

THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:

620-63-SM—United States Steel Corporation, American Bridge Division, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania filed for approval of the material known as USS "Ambridge" Standard Steel Joists "J" Series, under the provisions of Local Law 51 of 1962.

USE: Joists used in all classes of construction.

DESCRIPTION: The "J" Series are made in depths ranging from 8" to 24". The top and bottom chord are cold formed from sheet or strip material to a flat "U" shaped section. The web member is from a steel rod bent to a zig zag shape and then resistance welded to both the top and bottom chord. The dimensions are in accordance with the tables on Sheet 6 and 7 of the applicant's catalogue, marked ABD 76315M, which is on file with and part of the record. The joists are designed in accordance with the Standard Specifications and Load Tables, Open Web Steel Joists, 1963 Edition of the Steel Joist Institute.

INSPECTION AND TEST: Tests were conducted at the Harrisburg Plant of the applicant under the supervision of the R. W. Hunt Company. The tests were conducted to meet the requirements of C26-519.0.d.1 of Local Law 51 of 1962.

mine what percentage of the published load would cause a deflection of 1/360 of the span. The figured loading is based on design moment for total load; therefore, the test was conducted so as to determine what percentage of the load that would cause the deflection of 1/360, and allow that percentage of the total load to be assumed as the live load. The tests showed that the load required to cause a deflection of 1/360 of the span ranged from 0.65 to 0.98 of the moment on which the load tables are based. Additional tests were conducted as to shear at end reactions and in all cases the test loads were greater than the calculated shears by 2.1 to 4.2. The complete report is on file with and is part of the record.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the material known as USS "Ambridge" Standard Steel Joists "J" Series for use in New York City, when installed in accordance with Local Law 51 of 1962. The Committee further recommends the approval of the load table for the Series "J" Joists as submitted in the catalogue described as the Standard Specifications and Load Tables Open Web Steel Joists, 1963 Edition of the Steel Joists Institute, except that the loads shown in that catalogue being based on total load (live and dead) shall be figured on the basis of 70% of that total load at the maximum live load, and 30% of that total load as the minimum dead load. It is further recommended that all plans submitted to the Department of Buildings, showing the proposed use of this construction shall be labeled: "Approved by the Board of Standards and Appeals for use in New York City, under Cal. No. 620-63-SM", and further that all bills of lading and/or shipping tickets shall be similarly marked".

Director.

GEORGE F. SKLENARIK,

Committee on Test.

Resolved, that the Board of Standards and Appeals does hereby approve this material in accordance with the above report.

COURT DECISION.

Matter of 267 W. 71st St. vs. Foley:—At Supreme Court, Special Term, Part I, New York County, Mr. Justice Hofstadter rendered the following decision in the New York Law Journal of April 25, 1966, page 18:

"Petitioner seeks review and annulment of the determination of respondent refusing an additional extension of time for completion of her building. Respondents cross-move for dismissal upon the ground that maintenance of the proceeding is time-barred. A proceeding against a body or officer is not available if sought more than four months after the determination to be reviewed becomes final and binding (CPLR 217). This is the case here. To be sure, the members of the board were sympathetic with petitioner in her plight, but refused to act favorably because they believed they could not lawfully do so under section 11-324 of the Zoning Resolution. Section 11-324 itself may be subject to attack (see Cherry v. Brumbaugh, &c., 255 App. Div. 880). The cross-motion is therefore granted and the petition is dismissed, without prejudice, however, to such action or proceeding, administrative or judicial, as petitioner may be advised to secure relief." THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads:
Cal. No. 485-56-SA—Red Jacket Manufacturing Co., Davenport, Iowa, requested that the resolution adopted October 29, 1957 and amended March 18, 1958, October 10, 1961, December 17, 1963, under Cal. No. 485-56-SA, be reopened and amended so as to include the Red Jacket Leak Detector.

PROPOSED USE: A leak dectector accessory for installation on submerged gasoline pumps.

DESCRIPTION: The Red Jacket Leak Detector is an optional accessory designed for installation in the discharge head on Red Jacket Model P33R1 and P75S1, submerged type gasoline pumps previously approved.

Its purpose is to indicate a leak in the discharge line from pump head to island dispenser.

When the submerged pump is started for fuel delivery, the flow rate through the valve is initially restricted to from 3 to 5 gallons per hour and builds up discharge line pressure if there is no leakage in the line. This pressure increase raises the valve poppet to a fully open position for full flow. This open position is maintained if system pressure remains above 4 psi.

If a leak exists, however, and discharge pressure falls below 4 psi, the poppet drops to a position whereby the flow is throttled to approximately 1 gallon per minute. This slow flow, shown on the meter at the island dispenser, indicates leakage in the line.

This leak detector has been accepted by Underwriters' Laboratories as an accessory on Model P33R1 and P75S1 pumps, file MH6497.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends that the resolution adopted October 29, 1957 and amended March 18, 1958, October 10, 1961 and December 17, 1963, under Cal. accordance with the requirements of C26-591.0, C26-592.0 Administrative Building Code.

In construction, floor and ceiling runners are first installed and the vertical steel studs, spaced 24 inches, are installed in the ceiling and base tracks. The first layer of Type X- $\frac{5}{8}$ inch gypsum board is then attached to the studs with 1" long self drilling sheet metal screws. The screws are spaced 8" on center along the top and bottom of the board and at the butt joints, and 12" on center at the intermediate studs. The second layer of gypsum board was laminated to the first board by means of the 3M Adhesive. Supplementary self drilling sheet metal screws $1\frac{3}{4}$ " long are used to attach the second layer of wall board to the construction. These screws are spaced 24" on center around the periphery of each board except at the top where the screws are spaced 8" on center.

The construction is in accordance with Dwg. T-2557 which is on file with and part of the record.

The partition successfully met the fire and hose stream test requirements of a two hour fire resistive non-load bearing partition. The complete report T-2557 of Ohio State University is on file with and part of the record.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the material known as 3M Brand Drywall Contact Adhesive for use in New York City as a laminating adhesive in drywall partitions, under the following conditions: that in addition to the 3M Brand Drywall Contact Adhesive, screws, spaced as herein described and in accordance with Dwg. THE RESOLUTION—

WHEREAS, the report of a Committee on Test reads: 726-65-SA—Terry Industries, a division of Textron Canada Ltd., Quebec, Canada, filed for approval of the appliance known as Terry Model H-320 and H-200 Oil Fired Salamander under the provisions of the Erection, Demolition and Alteration Rules of the Board and the Regulations of the Fire Commissioner.

PROPOSED USE: To supply temporary heat in building construction operation.

DESCRIPTION: The requested models are basically the same, differing as to BTU rating, being 320,000 and 200,000 BTU/hr respectively.

The unit consists of three major assemblies:

1. The air system which includes combustion air supply and cooling air.
2. Fuel system which includes fuel storage and distribution.
3. Ignition system which includes ignition and safety controls.

The air system which is supplied by a fan is divided into two parts—combustion air supply and the cooling air.

The combustion air supply picked up by the air intake is mixed with the oil and projected into the combustion chamber by the air scoop where it burns and leaves the chamber through the heat exchanger.

The cooling air passes through the heat exchanger tubes and around the combustion chamber and leaves the heater through an air cone.

The base of the heater is designed to hold the fuel supply tank. The fuel from the tank is carried into the fuel filter and then into the pump and thence to the nozzle where it is atomized so that it can mix with the air and become a combustible vapor.

The basic component of the ignition system is a 10,000 volt transformer designed to operate at 110 volts.

The safety controls consist of two parts—the primary controls and the combination controls.

The purpose of the primary controls is to protect the heater from the following: low voltage and flame failure. The relay is designed to allow the unit to operate down to 93 volts if the voltage drops during operation but will not allow a start if the voltage drops below 91 volts. The flame failure detector or is to detect presence of fire in the combustion chamber. The device will not allow the unit to start if there is presence of flame or light and will also shut down the ignition system after flame failure is established.

The combination controls consist of limit control and fan switch. The limit control protects the unit from overheating by shutting down the ignition and fuel supply as the discharge air temperature rises to 250°F. The fan, however, will keep running thereby cooling the heat exchanger. As the heat exchanger cools and the air temperature drops to 225°F the limit control contact will close restarting the combustion.

INSPECTION AND TEST: The salamander has been approved by the Canadian Standards Association and by the Underwriters' Laboratories under MP3034.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends the approval of the appliance known as Terry Model H320 and H200 Oil Fired Salamanders for temporary use in supplying heat for construction work in accordance with regulations of the Fire Commissioner and Rule 2.7 of the Board's Rules for the Erection, Alteration and Demolition, provided that the heaters will be refueled only when not in operation and then only by means of approved safety cans equipped with a flexible spout that will fit into the fuel tank; that all electrical wiring and connections be in accordance with the Electrical Code of the City of New York; that such heaters, when used, shall be spaced so as to allow not over 50,000 BTU/hr heat output for each 1000 sq. ft. of floor area; that the area is to be adequately ventilated; that the heater is to be vented. 727-65-SA—Vendbar Industries, Limited, Toronto, Canada, filed for approval of the appliance known as Vendbar Milkshake Vending Machine, Model MS-6, for use in New York City under the provisions of Chapter 19, Administrative Code and the Submerged Inlet Rules of the Board.

PROPOSED USE: Automatic coin-operated vending machine to dispense milkshake drinks.

DESCRIPTION: The Vendbar Milkshake Vendor is a coin-operated, electrically powered, vending machine for dispensing three flavors of either chocolate, vanilla or strawberry, instantized powdered milkshake base which is reconstituted separately for each vend by intimate mixing with ice water from a mixing bowl to a cup at the cup drop station.

Water is supplied to the vendor from a public service drinking water line on location thru the main inlet line. A manual shutoff valve and check valve is attached to the inlet line on exterior of vendor cabinet. A full water line is used all the way to the dispensing three solenoid valves. On this main line, prior to attachment to the manifold at the solenoid valves are: a Watts water strainer, an Everpure #C3 water purifier, a Watts pressure regulator and gauge, a "T" connection which separates the main line into two lines; a by-pass line for the water bath, with filling needle valve attached, and the main line with skimmer solenoid valve continues to and enters the water tank assembly. In the water tank the water line forms a 50 foot water cooling coil and terminates at the three solenoid valves on the manifold. These solenoids operate on a normally closed circuit, acting as a first step check valve. Should there be any feed-back into the refrigerator water coil, a further check on the solenoid valve placed on the output side of the water purifier acts in the same way. The whole system is protected against feed-back by a check valve installed on the main inlet line.

A water agitator and motor are mounted on the water tank assembly. Non-toxic plastic tubing from the solenoid valves to the mixing bowls spray tubes are secured with spring hose clips. The spray tubes with stainless steel sprayheads are connected to the mixing bowl and whipper assemblies. Pure latex rubber tubing attached at bottom of mixing bowls with a stainless steel delivery spout, dispense mixed drink to cup on cup drop station. Below cup drop station is a water waste bucket with float bottle that de-activates shutdown switch when waste pail becomes filled, the machine becomes inoperative.

For the Model MS-6 Refrigerator, Series 6001-6100, inclusive:

The refrigeration system consists of two hermetically sealed refrigerator units, one consisting of a 1/3 h.p. Dunham Bush, Model A3SC, charge 14 ozs. Freon 12, for coil in the water bath assembly for cooling water for the Vendbar Milkshake Vendor. The second refrigerator unit consists of a 1/6 h.p. Tecumseh, Model AE-6H, charge 6 ozs. Freon 12, with a blower coil located directly behind the mixing bowls.

For the Model MS-6 Refrigerator, Series 6101 onwards:

The water cooler refrigerator consists of a 1/3 h.p. Tecumseh, Model Cat. 34.H.T., charge 14 ozs. Freon 12.

The air cooler refrigerator consists of a 1/6 h.p. Tecumseh, Model AE-6H, charge 6 ozs. Freon 12.

INSPECTION AND TEST: All details of construction were examined by Assistant Architect T. W. Farricker, Jr.

The vendor was tested and approved by the CSA testing laboratories, Toronto, Canada under report No. LR 21551.

Nytralite Aggregate Inc., West Nyack, New York, requested that the resolution adopted May 22, 1962 under Cal.

1208-61-SM be reopened and amended so as to include 5000 p.s.i., concrete.

PROPOSED USE: Lightweight aggregate.

DESCRIPTION: There has been no change in the material nor in the method of manufacture. The request is to permit the use of the material in 5000 p.s.i. concrete. The limitation of 4000 p.s.i., concrete and its use in column only was due to the provisions of the Code. C26-1478.0 Administrative Building Code now allows the use of 5000 p.s.i., concrete in controlled concrete.

INSPECTION AND TEST: The original tests included tests in excess of 5000 p.s.i. and therefore no further tests were conducted.

RECOMMENDATION: The Committee on Test recommends that the resolution adopted May 22, 1962 under Cal. 1208-61-SM be reopened and amended so as to permit the use of the material Nytralite to be used in controlled concrete under the provisions of C26-1478.0 Administrative Building Code with a maximum f'c of 5000 p.s.i., with a minimum of 8 sacks of cement per cu. pd., of concrete and with an "n" value of 11.5 and that all other requirements of the resolution adopted May 22, 1962 under Cal. 1208-61-SM be complied with.

PROPOSED USE: To dispense blended gasoline and lube oil for outboard motors and straight gasoline for inboard motors and automobiles.

DESCRIPTION: The Wayne gas/oil motor fuel pump is actually two separate units having two supply sections, two meters and two separate computers, one for gasoline and one for oil which compute the price of each.

It is equipped with two concentric hoses, one for gasoline and one for oil connected to a single nozzle by means of an adaptor. The actual blending of the gas and oil takes place at the nozzle where it is possible by using a selector knob on the unit to obtain straight gasoline or gas/oil mixtures in ratios of 16:1, 20:1, 24:1, or 40:1, indicating parts of gasoline to one part of oil.

Model 411Q This is the basic model having a standard gasoline pumping unit and motor, an oil reservoir tank which holds approximately 13 gallons of oil and is manually filled. The oil tank has a built in low-level float which automatically shuts off the entire unit when the oil level gets down to approximately 2 gallons.

Model 411Q-1 This model has a remote gasoline supplied system. The oil supply system is the same as the Model 411Q.

Model 411R This model has the conventional gasoline pumping unit supply; however, provisions have been added to permit remote filling of the oil tank and an additional upper float has been incorporated in the oil tank to shut off the remote oil supply when the tank is filled.

Model 411R-1 This model has both the gasoline and oil supplied by remote pumps.

Model 431Q This model is a lighted version of the Model 411Q.

The canopy type lighting from our previously approved Model 420 is used to accomplish this.

Model 431R Lighted version of Model 411R.

Model 431Q-1 Lighted version of Model 411Q-1.

Model 431R-1 Lighted version of Model 411R-1.

Excerpts From The Administration Building Code

C26-335.0 Apparatus for Testing "Fireproofed" Wood

b. The accuracy of the pyrometers used to determine temperatures in these tests shall be checked periodically.

C26-336.0 Crib Test for "Fireproofed" Wood

A crib test for "fireproofed" wood shall be made in the following manner: Twelve test pieces each one-half of an inch square or less in cross-section and six inches long shall be built up in three layers of four samples each, spaced equidistant from each other to form a crib six inches square. The bottom of the crib shall be set six inches above a bunsen burner and subjected to a temperature of twelve hundred degrees Fahrenheit for one minute. The material shall be unacceptable if after removal of the burner the flame persists in any piece longer than twenty seconds and the glow longer than thirty seconds.

C26-337.0 Timber Test for "Fireproofed" Wood

a. A timber test for "fireproofed" wood shall be made in the following manner: Two test pieces each three-quarters by one and one-half inches in cross section and twelve inches long shall be laid flat, in contact, across the top of a gas crucible furnace and subjected for two minutes to a flame of seventeen hundred degrees Fahrenheit. At the expiration of that time the test pieces shall be removed from the furnace and the duration of the flame and glow recorded.

The test pieces shall then be cross-cut at the point in the burned section where the unburned cross-sectional area is the least and that area shall be measured and recorded. Any piece shall be unacceptable in which the flame persists for longer than fifteen seconds and the glow for longer than twenty seconds. The unburned area of hard woods shall be at least fifty-five percent and of soft woods at least forty-five percent of the original cross-sectional area.

b. Where timber test samples of standard cross-sectional dimensions are unobtainable from the manufactured produce, smaller sections shall be used in making timber tests, but if the cross-sectional area is less than the standard, the unburned area may be ignored.

c. In making this test, woods from deciduous trees, except poplar (white wood), basswood, red gum and tupelo, shall be considered hardwoods while all other woods including those specifically mentioned above shall be considered softwoods.

C26-338.0 Shavings Test for "Fireproofed" Wood

b. The shavings shall be packed down moderately to reduce the air spaces. A bunsen yellow flame shall then be placed beneath the vessel so that the flame is in contact with the shavings. After twenty-five seconds the flame shall be removed. Excerpts From The Administration Building Code

C26-335.0 Apparatus for Testing "Fireproofed" Wood

a. Tests for "fireproofed" wood shall be conducted in a fume hood so regulated as to avoid any disturbance of the test flame.

b. The accuracy of the pyrometers used to determine temperatures in these tests shall be checked periodically.

C26-336.0 Crib Test for "Fireproofed" Wood

A crib test for "fireproofed" wood shall be made in the following manner: Twelve test pieces each one-half of an inch square or less in cross-section and six inches long shall be built up in three layers of four samples each, spaced equidistant from each other to form a crib six inches square. The bottom of the crib shall be set six inches above a bunsen burner and subjected to a temperature of twelve hundred degrees Fahrenheit for one minute. The material shall be unacceptable if after removal of the burner the flame persists in any piece longer than twenty seconds and the glow longer than thirty seconds.

C26-337.0 Timber Test for "Fireproofed" Wood

a. A timber test for "fireproofed" wood shall be made in the following manner: Two test pieces each three-quarters by one and one-half inches in cross section and twelve inches long shall be laid flat, in contact, across the top of a gas crucible furnace and subjected for two minutes to a flame of seventeen hundred degrees Fahrenheit. At the expiration of that time the test pieces shall be removed from the furnace and the duration of the flame and glow recorded.

The test pieces shall then be cross-cut at the point in the burned section where the unburned cross-sectional area is the least and that area shall be measured and recorded. Any piece shall be unacceptable in which the flame persists for longer than fifteen seconds and the glow for longer than twenty seconds. The unburned area of hard woods shall be at least fifty-five percent and of soft woods at least forty-five percent of the original cross-sectional area.

b. Where timber test samples of standard cross-sectional dimensions are unobtainable from the manufactured produce, smaller sections shall be used in making timber tests, but if the cross-sectional area is less than the standard, the unburned area may be ignored.

c. In making this test, woods from deciduous trees, except poplar (white wood), basswood, red gum and tupelo, shall be considered hardwoods while all other woods including those specifically mentioned above shall be considered softwoods.

C26-338.0 Shavings Test for "Fireproofed" Wood

a. A shaving test for "fireproofed" wood shall be made in the following manner: A mass of shavings shall be cut fairly thick by hand plane from the test sample and placed to a depth of two inches in a metal vessel twelve inches in diameter, the bottom of which consists of a wire screen of one-half inch mesh.

b. The shavings shall be packed down moderately to reduce the air spaces. A bunsen yellow flame shall then be placed beneath the vessel so that the flame is in contact with the shavings. After twenty-five seconds the flame shall be removed. The flame shall show a maximum height of six inches above the top of the bed of shavings and the shavings shall be consumed in five or more minutes.

C26-339.0 Determination of Results of "Fireproofed" Wood Tests

The wood represented by any one test sample shall be considered to have passed the requirements of this title if any two of the three tests, prescribed in Sections C26-336.0 through C26-338.0 are satisfactory.
